LIVINGSTON COLLEGE

Livingston Student Center
84 Joyce Kilmer Avenue
Piscataway, NJ 08854

Livingston is an open book waiting to pour out its knowledge. It is also the campus where parents are seen as "cool." It is a place of peace and quiet.

CONNECTION POINT

Livingston College links students of all backgrounds and all experiences.

Livingston has always broken the rules. It was the first to go coed of all the Rutgers campuses. Moreover it was the first to bring programs such as Computer Science, Puerto-Rican and Caribbean Studies, African Studies, Women's Studies and the Physician Assistant Program. To the university. It is a place where taking a risk, being bold and being your own person was encouraged. Livingston students have always wanted to make changes, for the better and to make a difference overall because this is the progressive college.

THE BIGGER PICTURE

The dreams that is Rutgers University

Rutgers University, our world for four (or five) years!!! College Ave: where we would go to eat, party, and once in awhile drop in for a class or two. Douglass and Cook College: the place we went to reconnect with nature and meet great people. Busch: where we only visited if our world involved science or math. Or if we wanted a pretty good dining hall meal. And finally Livingston College: the place where everyone knows your face and name. Where the only number that was associated with to you was your phone number. At Livingston, you ate and laughed with your Dean. It was home sweet home.

Rutgers is such a great university, that the important stuff happens outside the classroom just as often as in the classroom. What pride we have at Rutgers.

The staff of residence life is always ready to give a smile. Livingston students are just a cell phone away. closeness is the key to making connections.

BUILDING LINKS

The bonds built during the years will never be forgotten.

Remember Freshmen year, meeting your roommate for the first time? There was either a connection between the both of you or an agreement to stay out of each other's way. If there was a connection, both of you did almost everything together. People soon started getting your names confused. Those in your house or floor became your extended family, they knew your business and you knew theirs. Eating was a social event, you ate with ten other people, never by yourself, unless you were in a rush. Through these different events there were deep connections made. Experiences were shared along with laughs and even some tears shed in love.

LOCKING INTO SUCCESS

An education follows with a lifetime of rewards

Let's discuss our purpose, let's talk about academics. What about our 18 credits per semester? Every professor thought his class was the only one we were taking or so it seemed. They gave us a truck load of work every night and it felt like we were doing five papers a week. Every book weighed a ton and we were expected to know all 1,876 pages by heart. Remember cramming the night before, hoping class will be cancelled the day of our exam? What about those study groups that were really social hours? All in all we had dun and it was worth it. We learned to blend our everyday life with studying and found time to season it with fun which time eventually topped with success.

These students are taking the first step to getting an "A". Roxanne is showing off her beautiful smile. These students are taking the second step studying to an "A".

Every organization has its own gesture, this is theirs. Fran stops for a second from recruiting to take a picture with Liberated Gospels Choir.

CREATION OF BONDS

Building lasting friendships through our general interests

Being at Rutgers University gave us the chance not only to get an education but to better form our identity. We gained this identity by being a part of clubs, fraternities or sororities. We spent many hours working on projects, whether it was practicing for a play, pledging or planning a concert event. The people in these organizations became our friends...sometimes bestfriends. They helped us reevaluate ourselves, feel proud, and develop courage. Our personality is a reflection of the different organizations we have joined and the people we have met in the process. We all wondered what would life have been without college bonding. It was amazing how each one of us became a building block fitted perfectly together with diverse personalities for a job well done.

TOMMORROWS LEADERS

Livingston seniors are the executives of the future

You are finally graduating! As you achieve this milestone, recognize the significance of your college experience. From the morning lecture hall classes, to the late night fraternity parties, you have matured alot. As you enter the real world to achieve your dreams, remember the good times that you've had. Coming from a wide array of backgrounds, the people that you have met over the past few years have taught you more than you could have ever imagined. You should look back on college as a time where you gained knowledge both inside and outside of the classroom. What you have learned will be with you for the rest of your life.

Here are the doctors, teachers and leaders of tomorrow. The people who are ready to take on anything.

After college
we look forward to working and our parents moving in! We also look forward to a continuation of a great life.

TIE INTO THE FUTURE

*Your future is bright
so grab it*

Now is the opportunity you've spent so much time preparing for. After years of education, you are now ready for the real world! The years ahead will represent new challenges and new triumphs. As you look towards this time reflect on the experiences you've had at Livingston College. Look at everything from organizational meetings to arguments with roommates, and rediscover the lessons learned in the college atmosphere. Use these lessons as they apply to your new life. While you may have to forfeit the late night pizzas and sleeping until noon, what lies ahead is the culmination of your college experience. So take these years and move forth with confidence to the next level.

Student

Knight Time

College is much more than a textbook education. It is also a time for exploring different parts of yourself. For instance, could you handle partying the night before and having a test the next morning or was cramming the only way for you to study? College is a time not only to learn about yourself, but to gain knowledge about people who are not like you (freshman year roommate!). And it is these things and a degree that makes you qualified to handle the world at the end of your four years.

Connecting city College Ave

College avenue is the little city that never sleeps. The place where it was not unusual to find people roaming the streets at 5am. College Avenue was the place to go when parting was the only thing on your mind. There was always some fraternity parties to attend. If it weren't the parties that brought you to College Ave., then it was the fat cats at the grease trucks that did the trick. Now if none of these things made you come to the campus, then at least one of your classes would have. Either way, it was the little New York city in New Brunswick.

Life under the microscope

Busch

Busch is home to the Math, Biology, Engineering, Pharmacy and Computer Science departments. Most of the Livingston students who had these majors usually moved to this campus. The campus housed some of our Livingston students in the Nichols apartments. In these apartments there was the comfort of one's own bathroom, kitchen and living room. Busch also gave us a place to go swimming in the beautiful Sonny Werblin Center. And after swimming, it was always a treat to have a meal at Buschs' dinning hall or student center. Oh, let's not forget our football stadium where we saw the Knights try their best (hey, at least they tried!).

Douglas and Cook

Ever wanted to see a real live cow? Or maybe you wanted to experience living on a farm? Well Douglas/Cook is the place for you! Douglas college is a women's only college, and as such it addresses many progressive women's issues. Besides Livingston of course, it is also one of the prettiest campuses at Rutgers. It's nature at its best. Cook is known for its farm life, where being woken up by a rooster was not uncommon. Cook is also known for Ag Field Day. Where farming is an all day event. When it comes to rest and relaxation, Douglas/Cook is the place to be!

O ur home Livingston

Livingston, home sweet home. Every campus contributed something special to ourselves, but none of them impacted us like Livingston. Livingston was our sanctuary. The place we came back to at the end of a long, stressful day. It was a security blanket, because like Dorothy said, "There is no place like home".

Spring Formal

Livingston put on their best dresses and tuxedos. It was time for Livingston to get all decked out. This grand occasion was the Spring Formal which was held at the Double Tree Hotel. It was put together by wonderful students of the Senior Class. It was an amazing night where you saw people who you never thought would dance, dance! People broke out of the study mode and broke into the 'getting down' mode. It was definitely a time to remember.

Spring Fest, is one of the greatest reasons why one should take a study break. Its fun and adventure for all. This is the one day in the year when Livingston students stop whatever they are doing to come and enjoy just being together. The day was a great success, not only could one get their face painted but also had the chance to dunk a fellow student. And if you were the kind of person who goes to places to fill your belly, well this would have been your day. From ice cream to snow cones, from candy apples to cotton candy, there was junk food galore. Spring Fest was a definite HIT.

Student Center

The Student Center was a great place to go to grab a bite and wake-up after a long night (Dunkin Donuts). If eating wasn't your thing, Then it was a great place to have some fun, with the gameroom which offered you pool, pingpong, video games and much, much more. If you'd rather relax at home, then rent a movie from the Student Center and take it with you. If studying was your thing, the Student Center offered great places to fouse on your school work. Now if none of these things appealed to you, there were always the great shows, performances and dances that take place in College Hall. The Student Center satisfied almost every need of the Livingston student.

Now lets talk about the Recreation Center: The center that offers numerous amounts of things to make sure you break a sweat. There are basketball, tennis and volleyball courts, and our world famous weight room, where you can both work-out and also have a great view (think about it). And lets not forget our soccer and football field where our Livingston men show their stuff!

Fine Dining

Lets admit it, Tillet was not that bad.

Going to the dinning hall was a time to relax, and unwind from a hard day. Tillet was a time to meet and speak with friends and lets not forget a time to grab a bite to eat. Everyday the dinning hall presented a variety of choices to choose from and if none of them were appealing to you, you could never go wrong with cereal! If cereal was not your style, then there was always the world famous salad bar or stir fied surprise, where you saw your chinese food being made right infront your eyes. The times spent at the dinning hall will always be remembered.

Group Time

Getting involved in extra-circular activities is one of the many ways that college students can relax after their grueling class schedules. What better way to meet new people, build your resume and learn various life skills, than by joining an organization. We all realize that “all work and no play makes for dull students” and that is the reason why Livingston offers so many different types of extra circular groups to appeal to our diverse population. Our organizations build future leaders and encourage cohesiveness not only amongst their members but amongst Livingston College and Rutgers University as well.

M LOCO

usic finders

Livingston's Own Concert Organization brought top name local and national acts to perform on campus. They also hosted annual events, such as the hip-hop freestyle competition and the breakdancing contest. LOCO also brought 'spoken word' and other avant-grade acts to Rutgers. It was a great way to meet people and learn about all the new bands out there.

C LUEP

Community builders

Latinos Unidos En Ponder was founded in 1969. LUEP was one of the longest running organizations at Livingston. LUEP was dedicated to improving the present educational, economical, social and cultural condition of the Latino community at Livingston campus, Rutgers Univ., locally and nationally. One of the ways LUEP did this, was to raise money for AIDS patients with an annual AIDS dance. Latinos Unidos En Ponder continues to be successful from the day they started till now.

Spin doctors

RLC

Radio Livingston Community (WRLC), were a group of music fanatics gathered in a little radio station on Livingston Campus to do what they do best... try to educate the public about music not heard on corporate stations. WRLC was entirely student-run, they write policy, enforce it, and fundraisers believe in it! Over the course of this past year, WRLC reached many milestones in its diverse history. Last spring, with a partnership between WRLC and the Piscataway high school station WVPH, WRLC was able to go high fidelity FM, broadcasting on the dial at 90.3FM. The partnership with WVPH was the most cherished part of WRLC's curriculum because now we can reach the students better. WRLC is on a rise to achieve greatness in the radio world.

Cause fighters

The Student Action Union (SAU) was a Livingston College organization dedicated to the fight against racial, social, economic, and gender injustice. SAU has worked on raising the social consciousness at Rutgers University by educating students on issues concerning police brutality, sweatshops, IMF/World Bank, and the case of Mumia Abu-Jamal. This past year, SAU hosted a lecture by Dr. Regina Jennings on the "Life and Legacy of Malcolm X."

LGC

The Rutgers University Liberated Gospel Choir (LGC) is a performing arts organization that was founded on the Livingston Campus of Rutgers University during the spring semester of 1969. Since its inception, the active membership of LGC has grown to approximately 50 faithful and dedicated members for the academic year. The purpose of the organization was to provide students with the opportunity to express themselves vocally while raising public interest in gospel music as an educational medium.

Stage performers

The Livingston Theatre Company was one of the university's most exhilarating organizations. The LTC provide culture and the arts to the college community while providing students with the opportunity to be involved with large theatrical productions. Students got involved in the multifaceted world of theater as actors, singers, directors, designers, musicians, stage hands, tech people and more. The students, under the mangement of the executive board, truly entertained audiences. This past season, the LTc produced "Moon Over Buffalo," "The Wiz," "Lucky Stiff," and "Fiddler On The Roof," all of which were artistic and commercial successes!

H4H

Habitat for Humanity was started by Jimmy Carter to create housing for the disadvantage. The chapter at livingston was founded in the year of 2000. It focused on the education of the general public about the underprivileged and their need for support. Every year during spring break, these students went off to build a house for a family. This was a group that Livingston holds in the highest esteem.

Lounge lizards

The Livingston Commuter Program provided a friendly and welcome environment to the over 400 students who opt to commute to school. There were three advisors and a graduate assistant who facilitated events and trips. The staff also was able to provide advice to those students who may not have known who to turn to due to their limited time on campus. The program had a lounge with a large screen television and a kitchen in the Livingston Student Center, which provided a sense of home and community. All students were invited to spend time in the lounge between class breaks or whenever they may have had free time.

Seniors

Class leaders

The Senior Class Executive Board was the committee comprised of elected seniors who worked together to plan events like the Annual Livingston Spring Formal, Senior Week, and Commencement. Led by various senior leaders these students acted as a liason between administration and the students. This year's committee undertook several fundraising activities and social events as well as successfully obtaining Joe Clark as commencement speaker. While many seniors were counting down the hours towards graduation, the members of this committee spent those hours trying to make this last year the most memorable for each member of their fellow graduating class.

Home sweet home; Livingston our home a away from home. After a long hard day of listening to professors speak, it's nice to come home to the quiet sanctuary of Livingston. Sometimes your floor mates got a little noisy but it wasn't something that a shut door couldn't fix. Whether your roommate was your bestfriend or your worst enemy you learnt something from them. Living on Livingston was great, it's like having an extended family.

First you tried to fit all your things into the car, pushing and squeezing things into the tiniest spaces. Then when you got to school, you had to try to get things out of your car. And if that was not hard enough, you then had to drag all of them into your room. But all in all, when everything was moved in and you got a chance to finally relax, it was great to be back on campus.

Study Time

Undergraduate students may often wonder about the purpose of studying at an institution of higher learning. Besides creating an atmosphere for growth and development, a college education is intended to prepare you for your goals and aspirations. Academics at Livingston College are not only deal with practical life situations. In a way similar to Livingston's ethnic diversity, academia is made up of many facets of learning.

Livingston College provides its students with an endless number of opportunities to succeed. The Learning Resource Center (LRC) and the Academic Information Center (AIC) are programs intended to assist, motivate and encourage all that participate. Tutor services, writing seminars, test taking and study skills, and academic advising are just a few of the strategies used by these facilities to ensure the optimal productivity of students. Kilmer Library and The Livingston Student Center provide areas for studying that accommodate the needs of any scholar. Finally, the greatest, most important form of learning takes place right on campus. Learning life lessons and experiences amongst a politically, religiously and racially diverse group is a form of education that can not be surpassed.

CONNECTED

to wires

The great thing about the computer lab is that it makes you aware that there truly are people who know how to work the things! Also, they're open late, usually have undergraduate staff (so they can translate computer lingo into real English), and, perhaps most importantly, they offer you a place of sanctuary from your roommate!

ADVICE

for all

The Deans at Livingston College are unusual in that they seem to appear in the most unlikely of Dean frequented places...wherever students are, the Deans can usually at one point or another be found as well. The library, the dinning hall, sporting events, the student center, you name it, there're there! That is what makes them distinct. Summed up to two words, the Livingston College Deans might be called "in touch".

End of Time

Ok its over, no more of those 8:10 am classes or dinning hall food. It's time to move onto the next stage of your life. That stage is the workforce, but don't dispair, you're prepared. You have a terrific education that will carry you as far as you let it. You have had the grand opportunity of spending four of more years with people of different cultures, backgrounds and personalities. Now, because of this experience you can connect with anyone that comes into your world. The college will miss you because each and every one of you added something to make this college great.

Seniors who have excelled academically and those who have contributed exceptional service to the College are invited to the annual Dean's Award Banquet. Award recipients were nominated by the College staff. Selection for an award in any of the categories yields one point for the nominee. To be invited to the Banquet, a student must have earned 90 or more credits and 3 or more points. This year's Banquet was held at the Holiday Inn in Somerset on May 5, 2001. The Banquet was the College's formal way of saying "Thank You" to the students who made a difference at Livingston College. It was an opportunity for seniors to share a special moment together with family and friends. Although the afternoon can be a little long, it was filled with a genuine appreciation and celebration for each other's achievements and contributions. THANK YOU!

Jeffrey Kollock's million dollar smile. One of the many presenters, Dean Robin Diamond. Two of a kind, Steve Matusz and Gabe Stein

Bachelors please say hello, hi my name is.... Audwin Levasseur, Sattik Deb, Christopher Trainor.

Alissa Rivera and Nick Zaverri with staff member Matt Winkler. Cheryll Abuedo with supportive friend Will Pagan.

Three College Deans present awards.... Anne Freire Ashbaugh, George D. Jones and Eddie J. Manning.

The Dean of Livingston College, Arnold G. Hyndman gives appreciative handshakes all afternoon long.

Livingston College celebrated its' Thirty-second Commencement Convocation on May 17, 2001 at the Louis Brown Athletic Center. The building was filling up with excited family members and friends as the graduates found their way to the back to line up by their majors. The Senior Class Officers and Committee Chairs lead the processional of graduates. The Convocation began with welcoming remarks by Arnold G. Hyndman, Dean of the College. Cheryll (pictured), Senior Class President, presented the reflections of the Class of 2001. Special awards were given to graduates. TerraAnn Madden, Class Speaker, talked about her experiences and love for the college community, especially with regard to all her friends and classmates. The Keynote Address was delivered by The Honorable Joe Clark. Finally, the presentation of the Class of 2000 began with every graduate's name being announced to cheers from their fans in attendance. Then, it was time for one last hug and picture with the people you spent the last 4, 5, or 6 years of your life with. CONGRATS!

End of Time

It is the end of the road. Our college years are now over but the memories will never end. The days of studying all through the night are finished but the knowledge we have gained will last forever. We now are off to live in the “real world,” where, instead of having classes, we will now have a 9 to 5 job. It is time to start a new phase in our life by using what we have learned in our college years. Congratulations and Good Luck!!
